Application for Junior Campaign Coordinator

Dear Recruiting Team,

I am completing my Master's in International Business at WHU – Otto Beisheim School of Management. I am applying for the Junior Campaign Coordinator role and am available from August 2026.

What draws me to Joli is the intersection of creative culture and commercial impact at the heart of what you do. My background is in brand marketing , specifically, how global brands show up consistently across markets and platforms. At Henkel, I contributed to the social content strategy for the Pattex No More Nails relaunch, developing assets for digital and social channels alongside TVCs and creator-style vignettes. Working across global and local brand teams taught me how to balance consistent brand voice with audience-relevant adaptation , a skill that translates directly to managing creator briefs and campaign communications across diverse talent.

The coordination side of this role is where I feel most confident. In my current internship at Henkel, I manage multiple workstreams simultaneously, liaising between creative agencies, local brand managers, and senior leadership, tracking deliverables, and flagging delays before they escalate. Prior to Henkel, I led a team of six at Pickyourtrail, maintaining CRM records, managing ongoing communications, and keeping campaigns on track across time zones using shared tools. I am comfortable with Google Workspace and understand what it takes to keep a fast-moving, multi-stakeholder team organized and informed.

I am genuinely excited to grow in influencer marketing and bring my campaign coordination and brand experience to the Joli team. I am available from August 2026 and happy to discuss either the Berlin or Hamburg office.

Thank you for your time , I hope to hear from you soon.

Sincerely,

Shruthi Sankaranarayanan
