Application for Brand Management Graduate Position starting from September 2026

Dear Recruiting Team,

I am currently in the final semester of my Master's in International Business at WHU – Otto Beisheim School of Management. I would like to apply for the Brand Management Graduate position at Procter & Gamble and am available from September 2026.

Some of my earliest memories of advertising come from India, watching the Head & Shoulders and Vicks ads that seemed to be everywhere and that somehow made everyday products feel meaningful. I did not have the vocabulary for it then, but I now understand what I was responding to: the clarity of the brand promise, the consistency of the message, and the emotional pull that made these brands part of daily life. That is the kind of brand building that drew me to marketing, and it is a big reason why I am applying to P&G.

Over the past year, I have worked in brand management at Henkel, contributing to the global Pattex brand across two internships. In my first role, I supported the brand strategy and market research behind a full Pattex brand review, synthesizing consumer data and competitive positioning across 10+ markets in Power BI to define strategic priorities. In my second, I moved into the campaign side, contributing to the Pattex Powers You global campaign by writing creative briefs, developing storyboards, and coordinating multi-country shoot logistics with the lead agency. Working across both the analytical and creative sides of brand management has given me a grounded understanding of how strategy translates into consumer-facing work.

Before Henkel, I spent under two years at Pickyourtrail in India, as an individual sales contributor. That role taught me something I believe is central to P&G's model: that strong brand thinking and commercial performance are not separate disciplines. Understanding what drives a consumer's decision and building the right story around it is ultimately what converts. I carry that instinct into everything I work on.

What attracts me to P&G specifically is the rigor behind the brand management model. The combination of consumer insight, cross-functional leadership, and the expectation to take real ownership from Day 1 is exactly the environment I am looking for. I want to build brands that matter to people in the way that P&G's brands mattered to me growing up, and I am eager to learn how to do that at the highest level.

Thank you very much for considering my application. I look forward to the opportunity to discuss how I can contribute to P&G's brand management team.

Sincerely,

Shruthi Sankaranarayanan
